To Whom It May Concern:

It is my firm conviction that:

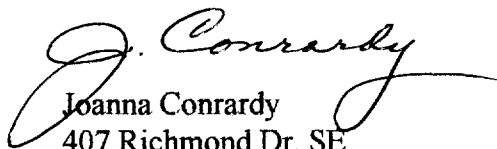

all food should be labeled clearly as to all contents and processes. If any edible product has been subjected to irradiation (or any other process - pasteurization, chemical process, etc.) it should be clearly defined on the label including any commonly accepted symbol designating the type of process, this accurate labeling should continue as long as people eat food, information about what companies use irradiation processes should be available to the public the Internet.

Your attention to this matter is appreciated.

Sincerely,

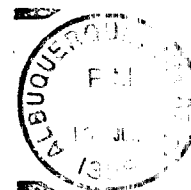

Joanna Conrardy
